GOVERNMENT’S SENTENCING MEMORANDUM

AND NOW, the United States of America, by its undersigned counsel, submits the following Sentencing Memorandum in the above-captioned case:

I. Statement of the Case

From June 2014 to December 2015, the defendant engaged in a concerted and prolonged effort to support the Islamic State of Iraq and al-Sham (“ISIL” or “ISIS”). ISIS is a foreign terrorist organization that has encouraged and taken credit for attacks against civilians throughout the world, including in the United States. The defendant was steadfast and outspoken in his support for ISIS and its murderous mission.

On numerous occasions, the defendant called for attacks on the West and expressed his desire to fight for ISIS. The defendant communicated with ISIS recruiters, attempted to raise funds for ISIS, gave ISIS supporters advice on how to travel covertly and join the terrorist organization, and disseminated a “kill list” that exhorted ISIS supporters to murder United States service members. The self-styled “Islamic State Hacking Division” compiled the list. It contained the names, home addresses, and photographs of 100 United States service members.

ISIS is not a closely held, hierarchical organization. Instead, it depends on persons such as the defendant to spread its hateful ideology, recruit fighters, and conduct attacks on civilians. The defendant pledged allegiance to ISIS’s leader and acted as a proxy within the United States for this terrorist organization. A guideline sentence will be sufficient but not greater than necessary and will deter the defendant and others who may be tempted by ISIS’s clarion call.

II. Background

On May 18, 2016, a Grand Jury sitting in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania returned a four-count superseding indictment. Rec. Doc. No. 42. Count I charged the defendant with conspiring to provide material support and resources to ISIS, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 2339B. Id. Count II charged the defendant with attempting to provide and providing material support and resources to ISIS, also in violation of § 2339B. Id. Count III charged the defendant with solicitation to commit a crime of violence in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 2 and 373. Id. Count IV charged the defendant with transmitting a communication containing a threat to injure in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 2 and 875(c). Id. During the time-period charged in the indictment, ISIS was designated a Foreign Terrorist Organization (“FTO”) under Section 219 of the Immigration and Nationality Act. Id. To this day, ISIS remains a designated FTO.

On January 30, 2017, the defendant pled guilty to Counts I and IV of the indictment. Rec. Doc. No. 107. Following the defendant’s guilty plea, a Presentence Report was ordered and prepared.

As set forth in the Presentence Report, ISIS is a designated FTO that is based in Iraq and Syria. PSR ¶ 5. ISIS’s stated goals are to create and rule a caliphate, and to fight against any nations that oppose it. ISIS has also committed atrocities against homosexuals and religious minorities, including the Yazidi people, in areas that it controls. Initially, ISIS encouraged supporters from throughout the world, including the United States, to travel to Iraq and Syria to join and fight for the terrorist organization. Over time, law enforcement and intelligence agencies began to arrest ISIS supporters and prevent them from travelling to ISIS-controlled territory. Additionally, the militaries of many coalition nations began killing ISIS fighters throughout Iraq and Syria. On or about September 21, 2014, Abu Muhammad al-Adnani (“Adnani”)—who, prior to his death, served as an architect of ISIS’s external operations and as ISIS’s chief spokesman—issued a recorded statement calling for attacks against citizens, civilian or military, of the countries participating in the United States-led coalition against ISIL. PSR ¶ 2.

Since then, ISIS has continued to encourage supporters to conduct attacks in their homelands. PSR ¶ 4. ISIS has claimed responsibility for the following terrorist attacks, among others: (1) On or about May 4, 2015, two ISIS supporters attempted an attack on the American Freedom Defense Initiative’s Muhamad Art Exhibit and Cartoon Contest in Garland, Texas; (2) On or about November 13 and 14, 2015, a group of attackers carried out multiple terrorist attacks throughout Paris, France, which killed approximately 130 people; and (3) on or about March 22, 2016, a group of attackers carried out bombings in Brussels, Belgium, which killed at least 32 people. Plea Agmt. Stmt. of Facts ¶ 4. In short, persons such as the defendant are critical to ISIS's efforts to bring new fighters to the so-called caliphate or conduct attacks to intimidate Westerners.

ISIS relies heavily upon social media, the Internet, and encrypted communication applications to spread its hateful message and recruit and mobilize supporters. Plea Agmt. Stmt. of Facts ¶ 5. Using these platforms, ISIS posts and circulates videos and updates of events in Syria, Iraq, and other ISIS-occupied areas, in English and Arabic, as well as other languages, to draw supporters to its cause. Plea Agmt. Stmt. of Facts ¶ 5. Members and supporters of ISIS frequently use a variety of electronic communication systems to attempt to avoid having their communications monitored by law enforcement. Plea Agmt. Stmt. of Facts ¶ 5.

The defendant was a significant contributor to ISIS's social media efforts. Using Twitter, he sent thousands of Tweets, retweets, and direct messages on behalf of ISIS. He repeatedly posted photographs and videos depicting ISIS's violent acts. See PSR ¶¶ 7-8 (quoting and summarizing tweets). The defendant made a concerted effort to cultivate an audience of like-minded individuals. Some of the defendant's most significant communications are attached as Exhibit A.¹

The defendant also served as an important conduit between ISIS recruiters in Iraq and Syria and English-speaking recruits. Indeed, the defendant communicated directly with at least two ISIS recruiters. One of these recruiters told the defendant, "[Two recruiters] are best for hijra [emigration to an Islamic country, in this context, to ISIS-controlled territory]/ Ppl who wanna k peeps then me nd Abu H can help." Ex. A at 75. Based on this and other investigations, the phrase

¹ The communications in this memorandum and Exhibit A are presented verbatim from the text received from Twitter. They have been reformatted in the exhibit to appear as they would have to someone viewing the defendant's accounts on Twitter. All errors are original.

“k peeps” refers to conducting attacks in the West. In other words, this ISIS recruiter sought to put the defendant in touch with ISIS members who could facilitate travel for potential foreign fighters or plan attacks in the United States and elsewhere.

The defendant provided other ISIS supporters with contact information for these ISIS recruiters. See PSR ¶¶ 10-12. The defendant advised ISIS supporters to travel covertly and, in one instance, to wipe “pro-IS materials from his computer and not wear Muslim clothes when crossing the border.” PSR ¶¶ 9-10.

The defendant also steeled himself to fight for ISIS. He prepared a military-style backpack, five high capacity magazines loaded with ammunition for an AR-15 or M4 variant assault rifle, a knife, fingerless gloves, and a balaclava similar to the type used by ISIS supporters to mask their identities. Although the defendant did not have a passport at the time of his arrest, he could have used these items to commit an attack in the United States or to practice for combat with ISIS overseas.

A guideline sentence is appropriate in this case. Although the defendant did not travel to fight for ISIS, he is a danger to society. The defendant contributed to ISIS's global operations and encouraged attacks against civilians both at home and abroad. He threatened United States service members and shared their private information, including their names and home addresses. In short, the defendant did everything in his power to support the terrorist organization. An extensive period of imprisonment is just punishment and necessary to serve as a deterrent to him and others.

III. Applicable Legal Standards

The U.S. Supreme Court has held that the U.S. Sentencing Guidelines are “effectively advisory.” United States v. Booker, 543 U.S. 220, 245 (2005). The Supreme Court advised sentencing courts that, even “[w]ithout the ‘mandatory’ provision, the [Sentencing Reform] Act nonetheless requires judges to take account of the Guidelines together with other sentencing goals,” specifically citing those goals listed in 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a). Id. at 259; see also United States v. Kimbrough, 552 U.S. 85 (2007) (stating that “the Guidelines, formerly mandatory, now serve as one factor among several courts must consider in determining an appropriate sentence.”). The Supreme Court has instructed that the sentencing court should calculate the Guidelines range, permit the parties “an opportunity to argue for whatever sentence they deem appropriate,” consider all of the § 3553(a) factors, and pronounce a sentence taking into account all of the relevant factors. Gall v. United States, 552 U.S. 38, 49-50 (2007).

Once a defendant is determined guilty of the predicate elements of an offense, it is within the court’s discretion to impose up to the maximum sentence authorized under the United States code. United States v. Grier, 475 F.3d 556, 561 (3d Cir. 2007) (en banc). Under an advisory guideline scheme, facts relevant to sentence enhancement do not need to be found beyond a reasonable doubt, thus District Courts are able to make findings for selecting a sentence and offense base level by a preponderance of the evidence. United States v. Corley, 455 F. App’x 178 (3d Cir. 2011) (unpublished). In the event that the sentencing court decides to impose a sentence at variance with a Guidelines calculation, the court “must consider the extent of the deviation and ensure that the justification is sufficiently compelling to support the degree of variance.” Gall, 552 U.S. at 50 (noting that a “major departure should be supported by a more significant justification than a minor one.”).

IV. Argument

The government agrees with the findings of the United States Probation Officer in the Presentence Report. In his letter to the Probation Officer and sentencing memorandum, the defendant raises a number of objections, asks for certain departures, and requests a variant sentence well outside of the advisory guideline range. For the reasons discussed below, the Court should reject these arguments and sentence the defendant to a guideline sentence.

A. The Probation Officer Correctly Calculated the Advisory Guideline Range.

In his letter and memorandum, the defendant raises a number of objections to the Probation Officer’s calculation of the advisory guideline range. None of these objections has merit. The Court should adopt the guidelines calculations in the Presentence Report without change.

1. The Statutory Maximum Sentence for Count I is Twenty Years.

In his plea agreement, the defendant acknowledged that the statutory maximum penalty for a violation of 18 U.S.C. § 2339B is “imprisonment for a period of 20 years, a fine of $250,000, [and] supervision for any term of years or life, to be determined by the court.” Rec. Doc. No. 105. The Court advised the defendant of this fact at his change of plea hearing. Rec. Doc. No. 109. The defendant now argues that the Court should sentence the defendant under the pre-June 2, 2015 maximum sentence of 15 years. See Def.’s Mem. 8-9. The defendant cites no authority for this proposition. Instead, he ignores his own plea agreement and cites to plea agreements the government reached in other cases. The defendant is wrong as a matter of law and the plea agreements he relies on are easily distinguishable. The defendant should be sentenced under the 20-year statutory maximum.

In Carmell v. Texas, 529 U.S. 513, 525 (2000), the Supreme Court reiterated that “[e]very law that changes the punishment, and inflicts a greater punishment, than the law annexed to the crime when committed” violates the ex post facto prohibition as first articulated by Justice Chase in Calder v. Bull, 3 U.S. (3 Dall.) 386, 389-90 (1798). A change in a statute can be applied to a continuing offense if the illegal conduct continued into the period after the enactment. See United States v. Torres, 901 F.2d 205, 226 (2d Cir.1990), abrogated on other grounds by United States v. Marcus, 628 F.3d 36, 41 (2d Cir. 2010); United States v. Johnson, 537 F.2d 1170, 1175 (4th Cir. 1976). If a conspiracy continued after a statute's effective date "the burden shifts to the defendant to prove by affirmative acts inconsistent with the object of the conspiracy that he withdrew." United States v. Gibbs, 813 F.2d 596, 602 (3d Cir. 1987) (citing United States v. Ammar, 714 F.2d 238 (3d Cir. 1983)), abrogated on other grounds by United States v. Williams, 40 F. App'x 669 (3d Cir. 2002). The defendant offers no evidence, and indeed there is none, that he withdrew from the charged conspiracy prior to passage of the USA Freedom Act.

Likewise, the defendant should not receive a downward departure or variance because the statutory maximum increased during the course of his conspiracy. The Supreme Court has explained, "Critical to relief under the Ex Post Facto Clause is not an individual's right to less punishment, but the lack of fair notice and governmental restraint when the legislature increases punishment beyond what was prescribed when the crime was consummated.” Weaver v. Graham, 450 U.S. 24, 30 (1981).

When the USA Freedom Act passed, the defendant was at least on constructive notice of the higher statutory maximum. In the context of a change in the Sentencing Guidelines, the Seventh Circuit has explained, “The choice is his whether to cease or persist; and if he chooses to keep going down the wrong path, the application of the new guideline and a harsher penalty cannot be said to have taken him by surprise.” United States v. Vallone, 752 F.3d 690, 696 (7th Cir. 2014). The defendant faced such a choice and persisted in his criminal activity. For example, on July 21, 2015, he bragged about purchasing a Yazidi girl for sexual exploitation. Ex. A at 96-97. On August 21, 2015, the defendant encouraged ISIS supporters to join ISIS’s affiliate in Libya. Id. at 98.

The defense argues that the lower maximum applies because the offense “predominantly took place before” June 2, 2015. The law draws no such distinction, however, and treats a “defendant’s failure to withdraw from an ongoing conspiracy as the equivalent of active involvement in the conspiracy.” Vallone, 752 F.3d at 696. The defense also points out that “eighty-five percent of the pages in the Government’s exhibit for trial appear to be dated prior to June 2, 2015.” Needless to say, the proposed trial exhibit, which is nearly identical to Exhibit A, is not exhaustive. Moreover, the two Tweets described above alone show that the defendant continued to participate in the conspiracy to provide material support after the higher statutory maximum took effect.

The defendant’s reliance on United States v. Topaz is misplaced.² Topaz was charged with and pled guilty to a single violation of conspiracy to provide material support to ISIS, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 2339B. United States v. Topaz, 2-15-cr-00450-SDW, Plea Agreement, ECF. No. 14, at 2 (D.N.J. 2015). The complaint alleged that Topaz and three coconspirators conspired to travel overseas and provide themselves and each other as personnel to ISIS. See United States v. Topaz, 2-15-mj-07189-CLW, Complaint (D.N.J. June 18, 2015). The complaint, which was signed on June 18, 2015, alleged that the conspiracy began in or about October 2014 and continued to the date of its execution. Nearly all of the allegations in the complaint pertain to conduct that predates the USA Freedom Act's effective date. A foreign government arrested one of Topaz's coconspirators in May 2015, and the FBI arrested another one of Topaz's coconspirators on June 13, 2015. The FBI arrested Topaz on June 17, 2015. Although the government stipulated that the lower maximum sentence applied, the plea agreement acknowledged that the sentencing court could apply the higher maximum. United States v. Topaz, 2-15-cr-00450-SDW, Plea Agreement, ECF. No. 14, at 2 (D.N.J. 2015).

2. The Terrorism Enhancement Should be Applied.

In his plea agreement, the defendant stipulated that the terrorism enhancement under U.S.S.G. § 3A1.4 applied.³ See Plea Agmt. ¶ 10 (“The parties agree that the offenses charged in Counts 1 and 4 involved and/or were intended to promote a federal crime of terrorism. Therefore, the parties agree that U.S.S.G. § 3A1.4 applies to the defendant.”). Now, he asks the court to disregard that stipulation or grant him a departure or variance that would negate the enhancement’s effect. Compare Addendum to PSR, Def. Ltr. ¶¶ 14-15 (“Mr. Aziz objects to the application of § 3A1.4(A) in paragraph 35 [and 43] of the presentencing report to add twelve levels because such an application violates Congress’s intent in passing the Sentencing Reform Act of 1984.”) with Def. Sent. Mem. at 1 (asking for a base offense level of 24) and 15-17 (asking for a variance under section 3553 for reasons of “proportionality”).

The defendant offers no reason why the Court should ignore this stipulation. Likewise, he cites no authority for his proportionality argument under section 3553. This is unsurprising, because the defendant's conduct falls squarely within the terrorism enhancement.

Section 3A1.4 requires proof of two elements: (1) the defendant must have been convicted of an offense that involved or was intended to promote a federal crime of terrorism; and (2) the offense must have been "calculated to influence or affect the conduct of government by intimidation or coercion, or to retaliate against government conduct." U.S.S.G. § 3A1.4, app. 4.A (stating that the "federal crime of terrorism" is defined by cross-reference to 18 U.S.C. § 2332b(g)(5)). With respect to the first element, the defendant was convicted of an offense listed in 18 U.S.C. § 2332(b)(g)(5) (listing § 2339B as a federal crime of terrorism).

With respect to the second element, "the application of § 3A1.4 . . . does not require a finding that [the defendant] was personally motivated by a desire to influence or affect the conduct of government. Rather, the government need only demonstrate that [the defendant] intended to promote a crime calculated to have such an effect, . . .

whatever [the defendant's] reason for committing them.” United States v. Awan, 607 F.3d 306, 315-16 (2d Cir. 2010); see United States v. Jayyousi, 657 F.3d 1085, 1114-15 (11th Cir. 2011) (“[T]he Guidelines’s precise language focuses on the intended outcome of the defendants’ unlawful acts—i.e., what the activity was calculated to accomplish, not what the defendants’ claimed motivation behind it was.”).

The defendant’s own statements make clear that the second element is met. The government obtained thousands of the defendant’s communications. On numerous occasions, the defendant praised ISIS’s violent acts and encouraged attacks on Westerners. The following examples are illustrative. Exhibit A contains many more. On August 8, 2014, the defendant direct messaged another Twitter user, “The reason I support The Islamic state is because they are the only ones fighting the enemies of Islam on 8 fronts in this war/ They are bringing back the khilafah we lost in the past 90+ years which was destroyed by France,UK,and Europe [sic].” Ex. A at 6. On January 8, 2015, the defendant tweeted, “#KillAllKufar #KillAllKifar #KillAllKufar

#KillAllKufar #KillAllKufar #KillAllKufar #KillAllKufar #KillAllKufar

[The term “kufar” translates to “infidels” and is synonymous with “non-believers” in this context.].” PSR ¶ 7c. Through this Tweet, the defendant is calling for the killing of all non-believers. On January 29, 2015, the defendant tweeted, “#IS ‘Know O Obama, that we are coming to America and that we will sever your head in the White House.” PSR ¶ 7d. This tweet also included a picture of a masked militant about to behead a soldier. On June 26, 2015, the defendant Tweeted, “Kuffar are celebrating about Same sex marriage law [sic],white house [sic] is in literal rainbows ,DC [sic] in high celebration, Allah’s punishment coming.” Ex. A at 92.

The defendant is not entitled to a departure or variance from the terrorism enhancement. Because of his plea agreement, the defendant has already received some relief from it. See PSR ¶¶ 68-70. Under the indictment, the defendant faced a maximum exposure of sixty-five years and a guideline imprisonment range of 360 months to life. His maximum exposure, and the guideline range, is now 25 years.

Moreover, courts have repeatedly emphasized that persons convicted of terrorism offenses should receive lengthy sentences. See Jayyousi, 657 at 1117 (“Terrorists, even those with no prior criminal behavior, are unique among criminals in the likelihood of recidivism, the difficulty of rehabilitation, and the need for incapacitation.”); United States v. Meskini, 319 F.3d 88, 92 (2d Cir. 2003) (“Congress and the Sentencing Commission had a rational basis for concluding that an act of terrorism represents a particularly grave threat because of the dangerousness of the crime and the difficulty of deterring and rehabilitating the criminal, and thus that terrorists and their supporters should be incapacitated for a longer period of time.”).

In United States v. Stewart, the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit considered the sentence of Lynne Stewart for various crimes arising from her interactions with Sheikh Ahmad Ali Abdel Rahman. United States v. Stewart, 590 F.3d 93 (2d Cir. 2009). At the time, Rahman was serving a life sentence in a maximum security prison for terrorism-related crimes and was subject to “Special Administrative Measures” that restricted his ability to communicate with persons outside of the prison. Id. at 109-10. Stewart, who was an attorney, helped Rahman communicate with his followers in Egypt. Id. at 114-16. Stewart did not plan or undertake any acts of violence. Id. at 116. Nevertheless, she was convicted of, inter alia, providing and concealing material support to a conspiracy to murder persons in a foreign country, in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 2339A and 956. The district court sentenced Stewart to a 28-month term of incarceration to be followed by a two-year term of supervised release. Id. at 144.

On appeal, the Second Circuit characterized the sentence as an “extraordinary 92 percent reduction from the recommended Guidelines range” and the term of incarceration as “unprecedented in convictions for material support of terrorism.”⁴ Id. at 165-66. The Second Circuit also noted that the terrorism enhancement applied as a matter of law, although the sentencing court “may differentiate between different levels of culpable conduct that nonetheless trigger the same substantial enhancement.” Id. at 148.

⁴ The government provides the following by way of comparison. Initially, the defendant asks to be sentenced at a range of 51-63 months. Def. Mem. at 1-2. Later, he asks for a sentence of 78 months. See Def. Mem. at 48. These would constitute reductions of 83%-79% and 74%, respectively.

The defendant's conduct falls squarely within the terrorism enhancement. The defendant cultivated a large following on social media and called for violent acts. In coordination with ISIS recruiters, the defendant attempted to facilitate travel for other ISIS supporters and expressed his own desire to travel to the "Islamic State." Following release of the "kill list," the government had to notify all of the service men and women to warn them that they had been targeted by a terrorist organization. As described in the Victim Impact Statements, victims purchased firearms, left their homes, and installed security systems to ensure they and their families were safe, not to mention the emotional trauma of seeing their names, photographs, and addresses on a kill list.

The defendant attempts to draw a distinction between himself and defendants who attempted to travel to join ISIS, gathered equipment for the organization, or sought to raise money on behalf of a terrorist organization. Def. Mem. at 32-39; see Addendum to PSR, Def. Ltr. ¶ 17 (requesting a departure because " 'the material support provided' and the defendant's 'planning or sophistication' are all extremely low"), 18 (requesting a variance because, inter alia, the guidelines “do not allow for adequate consideration of the . . . ineffectiveness of [the defendant’s] actions”). This distinction is misplaced.

The defendant did everything within his power to provide this type of support that he considers to be within the enhancement. Although he did not travel to join ISIS, the defendant repeatedly advised others on how to do so. The defendant also expressed his desire to join his coconspirators in the “Islamic State.” Although the defendant did not supply ISIS with equipment, he researched and glorified the weapons and equipment used by ISIS on the battlefield. Moreover, the defendant acquired a large quantity of assault rifle ammunition and concealed it to avoid detection. Although a firearm was not recovered, the defendant’s own statements make clear that he wanted to obtain one. The defendant bragged, “Pennsylvania have [sic] very light gun laws its [sic] very easy to arm yourself.” Ex. A at 26.

The defendant also made efforts to raise funds for ISIS. On April 16, 2015, he tweeted from the account @ansarlummah2BL (likely an homage to Osama Bin Laden), “Perform your Islamic duty. Support the Jihad with your wealth. . . . SHARE . . . DM [direct message] for more info.” Ex. A at 29. Although it does not appear that anyone direct messaged the defendant about this post, it is likely that ISIS supporters may have donated independently or shared this posting with others.

Although the defendant never traveled overseas or attempted an attack in the United States, his prolonged support of ISIS, combined with his incitement of others and preparation to engage in violence, show that he is as dangerous and culpable as those who have. With the plea agreement, the defendant has already received substantial relief from the terrorism enhancement. Further departure or variance from it is unwarranted.

3. The Enhancement for Conduct Evidencing an Intent to Carry Out the Threat Should be Applied.

Section 2A6.1(b)(1) provides for an enhancement “when the offense involved any conduct evidencing an intent to carry out [the] threat.” U.S.S.G. § 2A6.1(b)(1) (emphasis added). The enhancement does not require proof that the defendant traveled to or sought out the victims he threatened. Courts have affirmed application of the enhancement based, for example, on the possession of items that could be used to carry out the threat. See, e.g., United States v. Ware, 386 Fed. App’x 10 (2d Cir. 2010) (unpublished) (defendant had history of physically abusing his girlfriend, was arrested in possession of a loaded firearm and the type of bullets referenced in his threats); United States v. Kirsh, 54 F.3d 1062, 1073 (2d Cir. 1995) (defendant purchased firearms and attempted to purchase ammunition).

Here, the defendant possessed, among other things, a large quantity of ammunition for an AR-15 or M4 variant assault rifle; five magazines; a balaclava similar to the kind worn by ISIS members; fingerless gloves; and a knife modified with tape, which would give it a better grip. The defendant also posted images of himself and others using these or similar items. See Ex. A at 13, 27, and 95. This evidence, coupled with the defendant's frequent glorification of violence by ISIS, including against the United States, are sufficient for the court to conclude it more likely than not that he intended to carry out the charged threat.

The case cited by the defense, United States v. D'Amario, 350 F.3d 348 (3d Cir. 2003) is inapposite. There, the defendant was already incarcerated when he mailed the threat. Id. at 352. The defendant did nothing else—and possessed no items that could be used—to carry out the threat. By contrast, this defendant armed himself, posted images of himself with weapons, and repeatedly glorified violence. The enhancement should be applied.

4. The Defendant is Not Entitled to a Departure Under Section 5K2.0.

The process for deciding whether to depart from the guidelines is covered by the Supreme Court's decision in Koon v. United States, 518 U.S. 81 (1996). The Court explained that, "Before a departure is permitted, certain aspects of the case must be found unusual enough for it to fall outside the heartland of cases in the Guideline." Id. at 98.

The Third Circuit has interpreted Koon as requiring a four-step inquiry.

First, we determine if the factor relied upon in the case makes it special or unusual, taking it outside the heartland. Second, we determine whether departures on such factors have been forbidden by the Commission. Third, we determine whether the Commission had encouraged departures based on such factors. Fourth, we determine whether the Commission has discouraged departures based on such factors.

United States v. Yeaman, 248 F.3d 223, 231 (3d Cir. 2001).

Here, the defendant argues that his age, mental and emotional condition, and lack of prior criminal history “come together” to justify a departure under Section 5K2.0(c). Def. Mem. at 19. Section 5K2.0(c) allows the consideration of characteristics or other circumstances, even if not ordinarily relevant to a determination of whether a departure is warranted, if such characteristics or circumstances “are present to a substantial degree” and if taken together make the case “exceptional.” U.S.S.G. § 5K2.0. The Sentencing Commission’s commentary states that departures under this provision “should occur extremely rarely.” U.S.S.G. § app. note 3(c).

The Court should reject the defendant’s motion for a departure. The characteristics he cites are not present to a substantial degree, and this case is not exceptional. Rather, the case falls squarely within the heartland of material support offenses committed by young, internet-savvy ISIS supporters.

The defendant's claims regarding age are covered by U.S.S.G. § 5H1.1. Age is a discouraged factor. The Sentencing Commission proscribes that departures based on age should be given only in the most extraordinary cases:

Age (including youth) is not ordinarily relevant in determining whether a sentence should be outside the applicable guideline range. Age may be a reason to impose a sentence below the applicable guideline range when the defendant is elderly and infirm and where a form of punishment such as home confinement might be equally efficient as and less costly than incarceration.

The Third Circuit has held that a defendant who is 18 at the time of his offense is not rendered extraordinary by his youth alone. See United States v. Rodriguez, 107 F. Appx. 295 (3d Cir. 2004) (unpublished); United States v. Shoupe, 929 F.2d 116, 120 (3d Cir. 1991).

In United States v. Rodriguez, the Third Circuit rejected a departure based on age for an 18-year old defendant. Rodriguez, 107 F. Appx. at 298. The court noted that “it is not uncommon for eighteen-year-olds to commit narcotics-related offenses, and those wishing to import drugs using couriers in this fashion often seek young, naive men and women without extensive criminal experience.” Id.

ISIS operates in a similar manner. The terrorist organization’s social media operation disseminates propaganda to recruit and radicalize young, and often naïve, supporters. The cases cited by the defendant in his memorandum, as well as other recent material support prosecutions, makes this clear. The defendant’s age falls squarely within the heartland of this guideline and is far from exceptional.

The defendant also relies on alleged defects in his mental and emotional condition. Section 5H1.3 provides, “Mental and emotional conditions may be relevant in determining whether such a departure is warranted, if such conditions, individually or in combination with other offender characteristics, are present to an unusual degree and distinguish the case from the typical cases covered by the guidelines.” Although this is an encouraged departure, the defendant has no history of mental or emotional problems. PSR ¶ 61. There is simply no evidence that the defendant has a mental or emotional defect, let alone a defect that is present to an unusual or substantial degree, as required by the Guidelines. Cf. United States v. Handerhan, 739 F.3d 114, 124 (3d Cir. 2014) (affirming slightly below guideline sentence under 3553(a) factors where defendant claimed his possession of thousands of images of child pornography was driven by his obsessive compulsive disorder combined with “internet addiction”).

Because the defendant has no serious mental or emotional defects, he appears to be arguing for a departure based on his upbringing. See Def. Mem. 20 (“[H]e was a seventeen-year-old living in complete isolation with is parents.”). The defendant provided no information regarding his home situation to the Probation Officer. Assuming counsel’s and the defendant’s brother’s and sister’s characterization of his upbringing are even true, this type of departure is explicitly foreclosed by the Sentencing Guidelines. See U.S.S.G. § 5H1.12 (“Lack of guidance as a youth and similar circumstances indicating a disadvantaged upbringing are not relevant grounds for imposing a sentence outside the applicable guideline range.”). In United States v. Withers, 100 F.3d 1142 (4th Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1132, 117

S.Ct. 1282, 137 L. Ed. 2d 358 (1997), the Fourth Circuit cautioned courts not to “create incentives for defendants to comb their personal circumstances in order to find evidence of hardship or misfortune.” See also Pullen, 89 F.3d 368, 371(7th Cir. 1996) (“miserable family history” is not permissible basis for departure in average case).

Even if the defendant is young, immature, and uneducated, none of the factors he cites is present in the case to a significant degree. Departure based on a combination of these factors, therefore, is unwarranted. Given ISIS’s use of the internet to recruit and radicalize, cases like this one are increasingly common. The defendant’s characteristics and conduct are squarely within the heartland of the guidelines.

V. Section 3553(a) Factors.

An examination of the statutory factors under section 3553(a) shows that a guideline sentence is appropriate. The defendant’s effort to support ISIS and undermine U.S. national security was sustained and egregious. The defendant’s isolation and lack of formal education weigh in favor of, not against, a significant sentence. ISIS and other terrorist organizations appeal to the defendant and others like him through violent imagery and messages of empowerment. It will likely be years, if ever, before the defendant fully renounces the hatred he espoused. A lengthy sentence is just, appropriate, and necessary to deter the defendant and others who are similarly situated.

A. Nature and Circumstances of the Offense.

The nature and circumstances of the offenses clearly call for a guidelines sentence. The defendant's conduct aided a significant foreign terrorist organization and undermined American national security. He acted over the course of 18 months, and his posts were viewed throughout the world. He repeatedly glorified violence, facilitated travel for potential ISIS fighters, and encouraged ISIS supporters to commit terrorist attacks. The defendant sought to strike fear in the hearts of innocent persons, including the family of U.S. service members.

The defendant did not act in a vacuum. His conduct was part of a larger movement to grow support for ISIS in the United States and abroad. The Court has received and reviewed several victim impact statements describing in detail the profound and lasting impact the defendant's conduct has had on the victims and their families.

Innocent people who happen to now live at the addresses named in the threats are now also at risk, even if they never served in the military.

The defendant's conduct was severe, and his support for ISIS cannot be understated.

B. History and Characteristics of the Defendant

The Presentence Report notes that the defendant has no history of mental or emotional problems. PSR ¶ 61. The evidence shows that the defendant was fully aware, indeed proud, of his conduct.

Therefore, a guideline sentence is appropriate.

The defendant appreciated the wrongfulness of his conduct. As described above, on August 8, 2014, an ISIS recruiter explicitly identified the ISIS recruiters the defendant should contact if he wanted to facilitate travel for ISIS supporters or plan terrorist attacks. Ex. A at 79. When the defendant's social media accounts were suspended, he repeatedly bragged about being able to open new accounts, which he did on at least 74 occasions. On July 11, 2015, the defendant posted an image of himself, wearing black fingerless gloves and a red face-covering. Ex. A at 95. Superimposed on the image were the words, “I’M BACK KUFFAR [non-believers].” Id.

The defendant believed that his communications might be monitored and attempted to avoid detection by law enforcement or intelligence agencies. On August 10, 2014, the defendant messaged another Twitter user, “The red dress is too tight and sorry as a support of the Islamic State I won’t show my face as fears of CIA or FBI thank you.” Ex. A at 8. After the FBI arrested Ali Amin, whose case is discussed below, the defendant changed his Twitter account username and claimed to be acting as an “Islamic Analyst.” See Ex. A at 98 (“I’m not a terrorist just here for the news around the middle East, Islamic Analyst, not affiliated with IS or Al Qaeda.”). However, the defendant did not change his behavior or disavow his previous views. Instead, he continued to encourage others to fight for the Islamic State. See, e.g., id. (“[Retweet]: The IS in Libya is in need of human resources, if you [sic] want to do Hijra then go to Libya! Contact these [sic] brothers [two Twitter accounts redacted].”).

The defendant couches his crime as the result of “Internet fantasies.” Def. Sent. Memo at 21. The communications summarized above show that the defendant understood that his actions had real consequences. In the context of sexual offenses, courts have repeatedly rejected arguments that defendant posed no danger to the public because they were simply engaging in fantasies. For example, in United States v. Fogle, 825 F.3d 354 (7th Cir. 2016), the Seventh Circuit upheld an above-guidelines sentence for traveling to engage in illicit sex with a minor. The court rejected the defendant’s argument that his sentence was enhanced based on “things he didn’t do or for fantasies he may have had,” noting that the defendant made persistent attempts to find minors to have sex. Id. at 357-58.

In his memorandum, the defendant claims that his parents, particularly his mother, drove him to ISIS. The defendant did not disclose this information to the Probation Officer, however, and it is not reflected in the Presentence Report. The FBI conducted extended surveillance of the defendant and his home and saw no signs of abuse. Following his arrest, the defendant’s parents told law enforcement that they had warned the defendant that he should not communicate with persons overseas and that he could be arrested because of his activity on Twitter. See Exs. B and C. For a period of time, the defendant's parents took his cellular telephone in an effort to thwart his conduct. It appears that the defendant could not resist ISIS's message and the adulation of his Twitter followers. For these reasons alone, a significant sentence is appropriate to protect the public from the defendant.

Even if the Court is to credit the defendant's allegations of abuse and neglect, a significant sentence is nevertheless appropriate. In United States v. Maier, 646 F.3d 1148 (9th Cir. 2011), the Ninth Circuit reviewed a child pornography sentence for substantive reasonableness. The district court noted that the defendant had suffered physical and emotional abuse as a child and had "very serious mental issues regarding his self-esteem, [and] depression." Id. at 1153. The district court also noted other mitigation factors such as the defendant's young age, lack of prior criminal history, as well as family ties and support. Id. Nevertheless, the district court noted that many child pornographers present similar mitigation factors, and that the specific circumstances of the offense outweighed those factors. Id. at 1156.

Among others, the district court noted that the defendant distributed and received an extremely large number of images; some of the images were sadistic and violent; and the defendant expressed his desire to have a daughter to molest, “regardless of whether this desire had an element of fantasy”; and other comments the defendant made online in which he expressed a desire to abuse children. Id. at 1156-57. The Ninth Circuit affirmed. See id. at 1157.

Similar considerations apply here. The egregious, prolonged nature of the defendant’s support for ISIS outweighs any mitigation evidence he might present. The defendant repeatedly glorified violence and sought to incite attacks, coordinated with ISIS recruiters, facilitated travel for ISIS supporters, and expressed his desire to join and fight for ISIS. A significant sentence of incarceration and supervision is appropriate.

C. Avoiding an Unwarranted Disparity

Throughout his memorandum, the defendant compares himself to other defendants. He argues that a substantial variance is necessary to avoid unwarranted sentencing disparities. The defendant's list of cases is clearly not exhaustive. He fails to mention several recent terrorism cases in which defendants received lengthy sentences. See, e.g., United States v. Sullivan, 1:16-cr-0005-MR-DLH, ECF No. 69 (W.D.N.C. June 27, 2017) (life sentence for attempting to commit an act of terrorism transcending national boundaries, in support of ISIS); United States v. Kareem, 2:15-cr-00707-SRB, ECF No. 489 (D. Ariz. Feb. 17, 2017) (thirty-year sentence for conspiracy to provide material support to ISIS, in violation of § 2339B, and related offenses); United States v. Ferizi, 16-cr-0042-LMB, ECF No. 66 (E.D.V.A. Sep. 23, 2016) (20-year sentence for providing material support to ISIS, in violation of § 2339B, and accessing a protected computer without authorization and obtaining information in order to provide material support to ISIS); United States v. Alla Saadeh, 15-cr-0558-SDW, ECF No. 24 (D.N.J. May 10, 2016) (15-year, maximum sentence for providing material support to ISIS, in violation of § 2339B. Defendant conspired with Topaz, see supra, was arrested in June 2015, and was sentenced under pre-USA Freedom Act statutory maximum).

Most conspicuously, the defendant omitted the case of Terrence McNeil, who was recently sentenced to 20 years of imprisonment for disseminating the same “kill list” that the defendant retweeted. These cases, and others, show that a substantial sentence is warranted.

The Third Circuit has noted that section 355(a)(6) exists to ensure uniformity across judges and districts. See United States v. Seligsohn, 981 F.2d 1418, 1428 (3d Cir. 1992); United States v. Boscarino, 437 F.3d 634, 638 (7th Cir. 2006) (“[T]he kind of ‘disparity’ with which § 3553(a)(6) is concerned is an unjustified difference across judges (or districts) rather than among defendants to a single case”). The Third Circuit has “made clear that disparate sentences are reasonable where facts on the record justify the disparity.” United States v. Parker, 462 F.3d 273, 278 (3d Cir. 2006); see United States v. Davis, 437 F.3d 989, 997 (10th Cir.2006) (“While similar offenders engaged in similar conduct should be sentenced equivalently, disparate sentences are allowed where the disparity is explicable by the facts on the record.”).

The defendants most similarly situated to the defendant are Terrence McNeil and Ali Amin. Both of these cases show that the defendant should receive a guidelines sentence.

McNeil pled guilty to multiple counts of solicitation to commit murder of officers and employees of the United States, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1114; and making a threatening interstate communication, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 875(c). See United States v. McNeil, 15-cr-0446-DAP, ECF No. 90 (N.D. Ohio April 18, 2017). According to the government's sentencing memorandum, from May 2014 to October 2015, McNeil maintained social media accounts on several websites, including Facebook, Twitter, and Tumblr. McNeil, ECF No. 96 at 1. On September 24, 2015, McNeil posted a file on his Tumblr account that displayed a GIF (looped) version of the same kill list that the defendant retweeted. McNeil, ECF No. 96 at 3. McNeil also released publically available information about the name and home address of a person whom he claimed was the Navy Seal that killed Osama Bin Laden. McNeil, ECF No. 96 at 4.

McNeil pled guilty pursuant to a Rule 11(c) plea agreement that called for an agreed-upon sentence of between 15 and 20 years.

McNeil, ECF No. 96 at 1. McNeil was between 21 and 22 years-old when he committed these offenses. Like this defendant, McNeil did not attempt to travel overseas or conduct an attack in the United States. Notwithstanding that McNeil posted the kill list months after it was already in the public domain, on August 2, 2017, the district court sentenced him to 20 years of imprisonment and a lifetime of supervised release. McNeil, ECF No. 98.

Ali Amin pled guilty to a single count criminal information that charged him with providing material support to ISIS, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 2339B. See United States v. Amin, 1-15-cr-0164-CMH, ECF No. 6 (E.D. Va. June 11, 2015). According to the factual basis for his plea agreement, Amin used the Twitter account @AmreekiWitness “to conduct Twitter-based conversations regarding ways to develop financial support for ISIL . . . and ways to establish a secure donation system or fund for ISIL.” Amin, ECF No. 7 ¶ 5. Amin also operated a web page and blog that proselytized for ISIS and advised ISIS supporters on operational security. Amin, ECF No. 7 ¶¶ 7-8. Amin also radicalized a local friend and facilitated his travel to ISIScontrolled territory. Amin, ECF No. 7 ¶¶ 9-19. Among other things, Amin put the friend in touch with an ISIS supporter, who was outside of the United States, on an encrypted communications application.

Amin was between 16 and 17 years old when he committed the offense. On August 28, 2015, the court sentenced Amin to 136 months of imprisonment and a lifetime of supervised release. The applicable statutory maximum for § 2339B was 15 years. The court departed downward approximately 25% from the guideline sentence. Unlike this defendant, however, Amin cooperated extensively with investigators. In fact, when interviewed by the case agent in this case, Amin “described the ‘Colonel Shaami’ accounts as being aggressive in their posting of ISIL related material.” See Ex. D. For these reasons, a guidelines sentence is necessary to avoid unwarranted disparities.

VI. Restitution

A number of victims in this case have submitted requests for restitution for costs they incurred after the defendant posted the kill list. The defendant posted this kill list within hours of when it was released by the “Islamic State Hacking Division.” Several of the victims incurred reasonable home security expenses to mitigate an apparent risk of harm proximately caused by the defendant’s crime. The Court should order restitution for these expenses.

A. Factual Background

The defendant was one of the first persons to circulate the kill list compiled by the Islamic State Hacking Division. He did so within hours of when it first appeared on the internet. The defendant distributed the names, addresses, and identifying information of military service members, at a minimum, in an effort to cause them fear. By including the hashtag #Baqiyah,, the defendant made it easy for his followers to find the posting. PSR ¶ 20. The defendant gleefully exulted, “Yep them US guys are pretty Fked” and added a hyperlink to a screen shot of the list’s cover sheet. Id. Approximately three hours later, the defendant retweeted a tweet from the Twitter account @Media_Shami. The retweeted tweet read, “Identities of

As a result of the defendant’s dissemination of ISIS’s kill list, many victims took additional security measures to ensure the safety of their families. Several victims installed security systems or moved from their homes altogether to prevent against attacks from ISIS supporters. The government seeks restitution for the following expenses:

Security Systems and Monitoring	$ 6,635.79	PSR at 20, 21, 26

B. Legal Standard

“The primary goal of restitution is remedial or compensatory.” United States v. Paroline, 134 S. Ct. 1710, 1726 (2014). Restitution also serves another important function – “impress[ing] upon offenders that their conduct produces concrete and devastating harms for real, identifiable victims.” Id. at 1727. Issues related to restitution “shall be resolved by the court by the preponderance of the evidence,” and “[t]he burden of demonstrating the amount of the loss sustained by a victim as a result of the offense shall be on the attorney for the Government.” 18 U.S.C. § 3664(e).

“[T]he court shall order restitution to each victim in the full amount of each victim’s losses as determined by the court and without consideration of the economic circumstances of the defendant.” 18 U.S.C. § 3664(f)(1)(A). For purposes of restitution, a victim is “a person directly and proximately harmed as a result of the commission of an offense for which restitution may be ordered.” 18 U.S.C. § 3663A(a)(2).

In offenses involving damage to or loss of the victim’s property, the court shall require that the defendant return the property. 18 U.S.C. § 3663A(b)(1)(A). If return is impossible, the defendant shall “pay ‘an amount equal to the greater of the value of the property on the date of the damage, loss, or destruction; or the value of the property on the date of the sentencing, less the value (as of the date the property is returned) of any part of the property that is returned.’” United States v. Simmonds, 235 F.3d 826, 830 (3d Cir. 2000) (quoting 18 U.S.C. § 3663A(b)(1)(B)). The Third Circuit has explained that restitution is limited to “an amount pegged to the actual losses suffered by the victims of the defendant’s criminal conduct . . . and based upon losses directly resulting from such conduct.” United States v. Quillen, 335 F.3d 219, 22 (3d Cir. 2003) (citation omitted) (emphasis original).

Apportionment of restitution is discretionary. Section 3664(h) provides that if “more than 1 defendant has contributed to the loss of a victim, the court . . . may apportion liability among the defendants to reflect the level of contribution to the victim's loss and economic circumstances of each defendant.”

C. Argument

The defendant appears to concede that the victims are eligible for restitution under the Mandatory Victims Restitution Act (“MVRA”), 18 U.S.C. § 3663A. See Def. Mem. at 51 (“Victims of a Violation of Section 875(c) Are Entitled to Restitution Only If they Can Show Probable [Proximate] Cause. . .”). He argues, however, that the government cannot establish the requisite causal nexus. The Court should reject this argument.

The Third Circuit has previously held that threat victims may receive restitution for expenses paid to render their property safe, even if the defendant did not actually damage their property. In United States v. Quillen, 335 F.3d 219 (3d Cir. 2003), the defendant mailed a state parole board a threatening letter that contained a white powder substance. Id. at 219. As it turned out, the substance the defendant sent was harmless and did not contaminate the parole board. Id. at 222. He pled guilty to mailing a threatening communication, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 876. Id. at 221. The government sought and the district court ordered restitution for, inter alia, $4,026.55 in hazmat clean-up costs and $122.00 to reimburse damaged personal property. Id. at 221.

The Third Circuit upheld the award of restitution. It noted that the district court's "only practical option was to order Quillen to pay the cost of ensuring that the mail room was in the same condition as just prior to the time it became unusable." Id. at 222. The Third Circuit also noted that other circuits have upheld awards of repair costs. Id. at 223-24. See also United States v. Overholt, 307 F.3d 1231, 1235-36 (10th Cir. 2002) (affirming award of restitution to the Coast Guard for the costs of cleaning up a property, even though the Coast Guard's losses were solely economic).

Quillen is analogous to this case. The defendant damaged the service members' property. By reposting the kill list, he rendered their homes unsafe. The victims undertook reasonable remedial measures to ensure that their homes were secure. The only way to make the victims whole is to award them these costs.

The defendant is also liable under the alternative theory of causation suggested by the Supreme Court in a recent child pornography case. See Paroline v. United States, 134 S. Ct. 1710 (2014). This case, which the defendant also cites in his memorandum, weighs in favor of an order of full restitution.

In Paroline, the Supreme Court considered the extent to which a defendant who possessed, but did not produce, child pornography of the victim was responsible for her losses. The Court held that restitution may only be ordered to the extent the defendant's offense proximately caused the victim's losses. See id. at 1727. The Court then held that in cases where a defendant's actions are not clearly traceable to the victim's harm, courts should use an alternative causal standard. Id.

The alternative causal standard has been called an “aggregate causation theory.” Id. at 1723.

The Supreme Court advised sentencing courts to “order restitution in an amount that comports with the defendant’s relative role in the causal process that underlies the victim’s general losses.” Id. The Court acknowledged that this causal calculation leaves open the question of how to determine the loss amount. Id. at 1727.

Acknowledging that “it is neither necessary nor appropriate to prescribe a precise algorithm for determining the proper restitution amount,” the Supreme Court did provide some guidance in how a district court should determine restitution. Id. at 1728. As such, the Supreme Court suggested that district courts determine “the amount of victim’s losses caused by the continuing traffic in the victim’s images.” Id.

Then, the court should “set an award of restitution in consideration of factors that bear on the relative causal significance of the defendant’s conduct in producing those losses.” Id. The Supreme Court listed several factors to serve as guidelines in determining this amount.

They include:

- the number of past criminal defendants found to have contributed to the victim's general losses;
- reasonable predictions of the number of future offenders likely to be caught and convicted for crimes contributing to the victim's general losses;
- any available and reasonably reliable estimate of the broader number of offenders involved (most of whom will, of course, never be caught or convicted);
- whether the defendant reproduced or distributed images of the victim;
- whether the defendant had any connection to the initial production of the images;
- how many images of the victim the defendant possessed;
- any other facts relevant to the defendant's relative causal role.

Id. The Court further noted that the government “could also inform district courts of restitution sought and ordered in other cases.” Id. at 1729.

Here, the Paroline standards for causation are met. By distributing the names, photographs, and identifying information, the defendant was “part of the overall phenomenon that caused [the victims'] general losses.” Paroline, 134 S. Ct. at 1726. Reproducing or distributing information in this case is akin to reproduction of child abuse images, as both play a part in causing harm to the victim in addition to the creation of the content itself. Id. at 1725. Although the defendant was not the sole cause of the victims' harms, the defendant was a cause-in-fact of them. Moreover, the victims' are seeking restitution for costs that were a direct and foreseeable result of the defendant's distribution of their home addresses in the ISIS kill list.

Presently, there are four other defendants charged with disseminating or posting this particular hit list. Two of those defendants, Terrence McNeil and Ardit Ferizi, have been prosecuted and sentenced. McNeil was ordered to pay restitution but only for costs incurred after he disseminated the list. McNeil posted the list in September 2015, some six months after the defendant posted the list. Ferizi was not ordered to make restitution.

Consideration of the remaining factors weighs in favor of an order of full restitution. The defendant was among the very first ISIS supporters to disseminate the kill list. These victims indisputably suffered, and continue to do so, from the threat of an ISIS supporter attacking them and their families in their homes. Because it is unclear whether the future defendants will be convicted, ordered, and able to pay restitution, the potential for them to contribute should not result in a decrease from the total amount. As is the case with child pornography, distribution creates significant harm to the victims, and the act itself all but guarantees that other ISIS supporters will view their addresses and possibly even target them. See Paroline, 134 S. Ct. at 1728. Over time, the court may consider other factors in reducing this amount, including future orders of restitution.

VII. Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, the United States submits that the Court should reject the defendant's arguments, adopt the recommendations in the Presentence Report without change, and sentence the defendant to a guideline sentence, a lifetime of supervised release, and award the victims for costs they incurred to render their homes safe.

لا إله إلا الله

@ansaralkhilafah

You support ISIS?

Yes I do why?

08/08/14 06:28 EST

08/08/14 13:47 EST

The reason I support The Islamic state is because they are the only ones fighting the enemies of Islam on 8 fronts in this war

08/08/14 23:43 EST

They are bringing back the khilafah we lost in the past 90+ years which was destroyed by France,UK,and Europe

08/08/14 13:47 EST

لا إله إلا الله

@ansaralkhilafah

The west invaded our lands shoved democracy down our throats took our khilafah away and place therein puppets and dictators who oppressed us

08/10/14 23:03 EST

US invaded Iraq and Afghanistan for resources and oil killed our men and children humiliated us and you expect us not to take arms ?

08/10/14 23:06 EST

And mind you that Britain and France created Iraq and Syria, Jordan these borders inshallah will be removed and the khilafah will expand.

08/10/14 23:08 EST

So the photos I have, wearing the red dress that's no good?

08/10/14 23:44 EST

I want to see who you are :).

08/10/14 23:44 EST

لا إله إلا الله

@ansaralkhilafah

The red dress is too tight and sorry as a support of the Islamic State I won't show my face as fears of CIA or FBI thank you

08/10/14 23:46 EST

But you can't see anything? I'm covered up. \n\nI won't show the CIA or FBI lol

08/10/14 23:49 EST

Sorry still can't take the risk and no I see the shape of your body no hard feelings.

08/10/14 23:52 EST

Where are from? What country do you live in?

08/11/14 00:07 EST

Good old MURICA

08/11/14 00:07 EST

America? lol

08/11/14 00:09 EST

@ansaralkhilafah

Yep born and from America

08/11/14 00:09 EST

You were born in the US?

08/11/14 00:11 EST

Yep born as Muslim as well

08/11/14 00:11 EST

You don't have work in the morning?

08/11/14 01:34 EST

Ur a teenager ?

08/11/14 01:35 EST

No I'm trying to get a job I'm 18

08/11/14 01:35 EST

@ansaralkhilafah

Yeah, I'm catholic and I won't convert. But I respect everyone. Just be nice to me and don't support IS lol

08/11/14 02:04 EST

Lol but I will always support Islamic Khilafah that's my right ðŸ˜ŠðŸ˜ŠðŸ˜Š

HEXAMINE PEROXIDE (HMTD)
HEXAMETHYLENE TRIPEROXIDE
DIAMINE

- Chemical Structure =
- Chemical Formula = C₆H₁₂O₆N₄
- Molecular mass = 208.169 g/mol.
- Shock sensitivity = High.
- Friction sensitivity = High.
- Density = 0.88 g/cm³
- Explosive velocity = 4511 m/s - Max 5100 m/s.
- Melting Point = Decomposes at 75 °C.
- Autoignition temperature = N/A.
- Appearance = White crystalline solid.
- CAS number = 283-66-9.

- HMTD is a high explosive organic chemical compound, first synthesised in 1885 by Legler.
- HMTD may be prepared by the reaction of an aqueous solution of hydrogen peroxide and hexamine in the presence of citric acid or Acetic acid or Hydro chloric acid as a catalyst.
- While still quite sensitive to shock and friction, it is relatively stable compared to other initiating explosives, such as mercury fulminate, Lead Azide, Silver Azide and Acetone Peroxide. And proved to be relatively inexpensive and easy to make.
- HMTD is sensitive to shock, friction, and heat. This makes the substance extremely dangerous to manufacture. It also reacts with most common metals, which can lead to detonation.
- HMTD degrades too quickly for modern commercial and industrial applications, becoming useless in a matter of weeks.
- Despite no longer being used in any official application, it remains a fairly popular home-made explosive and has been used in a large number of Bombings throughout the world, and was possibly used in the 7 July 2005 London bombings.

PREPARATION

HMTD has been used as a detonator, it is safer and more powerful than mercury fulminate, Lead Azide, Silver Azide or acetone peroxide. It is stable when compared to other primary explosives, and it is one of the safest explosive peroxides.

476

HMTD should be kept cool and dry as it may evaporate or decompose, it should also be kept away from metals as it will corrode them. HMTD will detonate if struck, but will only burn if heated.

When preparing or using HMTD avoid touching it with any metal labware, for it forms extremely sensitive salts if it touches metals, which then creates heat and then potentially detonation. If using a metal detonator for example aluminium, copper etc, then coat the inside and outside of the detonator case with a plastic or silicone sealer, prior to adding the HMTD. I wouldn't feel safe with ANY metal in contact with HMTD.

THE REACTION

SYNTHESIS

Materials Required

Chemicals	Materials
1. Hydrogen Peroxide 35% H ₂ O ₂ (85ml) or 90ml (30% H ₂ O ₂ will also work, it will just reduce the yield a bit)	1.Digital Scale
2. Hexamine C ₆ H ₁₂ N ₄ (14 Grams) or (28 Grams)	2.Stirring Rod
3. Ethanol 95% C ₂ H ₅ OH	3.Filter Paper
4. Organic Citric Acid C ₆ H ₈ O ₇ (2) Grams or (42 Grams)	4.Soap Holder
5. Distilled Water	5.Plastic spoon
6. Ice	6.Beakers 100ml (2)
7. Sodium Bicarbonate NaHCO ₃ 5 Grams	7.Beakers 250ml (2)
	8.Graduated cylinder 100ml (1)
	9.Ring clamp (1)
	10.Ring Stand (1)
	11.Glass Funnel (1)
	12. Lab Gloves
	13.Safety Goggles
	14.Water absorbing tissue paper
	15.Water Bath
	16.Thermometer

- Safety equipment, minimally including heavy leather gloves, impact-resistant goggles, hearing protection, and face shield.
- As with other reactions that pose the risk of explosion, synthesis should not be performed in an enclosed area.

PROCEDURES METHOD A USING CITRIC ACID AS CATALYST

1. Take a Graduated cylinder [100mL] and measure 45mL of Hydrogen Peroxide 35% in to it. (You can use a pipet or a glass funnel to prevent spilling of H₂O₂). The 35% H₂O₂ should be pre-chilled in the freezer for a half hour or so before use.
2. 50% H₂O₂ is too concentrated to make HMTD because of higher risk of run-away reaction. But with careful temperature control, it shouldn't be a major problem and using 30% H₂O₂ concentration the ADVANTAGE would be the reaction time is shorter with higher yield.

3. And then put that 45mL Hydrogen Peroxide 35% into a 250mL beaker.

DETONATOR FOR HMTD

The base explosive will be picric acid and the primary explosive will be HMTD. There are a number of different primary explosives that could be substituted but HMTD is the easiest to produce and is made from readily available materials. A word of warning, however, HMTD is not stable at elevated temperatures so det made with it must be protected from heat. Be sure that the picric acid base charge is very dry before loading. Dry it at about 80° C for two hours before loading. This can be accomplished with a heat lamp or a simple light bulb, be sure not to overheat. The HMTD should be dried at room temperature or slightly above, overheating it may cause it to become inert. Pour half of the 1 gram picric acid base charge into the case. Use a 5/16" wooden or plastic dowel or rod to carefully press it into the bottom. Use slow force when pressing the rod into the case. Do not twist, tap or pound the rod in any way. A plastic bucket or a heavy cardboard box should be placed over the press in case of an accidental explosion, this will happen from time to time but the covering will protect you from injury.

Add the second half of the base charge and press as before. Pour 0.75 to 1 gram of the HMTD into the case and press as above. Add a few grains of black powder to the top of the primary charge and then carefully slide the igniter or bulb match assembly into the case mouth and seal with epoxy. When the epoxy is dry, spray the entire unit with plastic sealer to waterproof it. The detonator is now complete and ready to use. When using this det try to use more voltage than the bulb calls for. This will cause the filament to glow hotter and faster before it burns out providing more certain ignition of the propellant.

Colonel Shaami

@kolonelsham

Your here correct

5/26/15 15:07 EST

yes

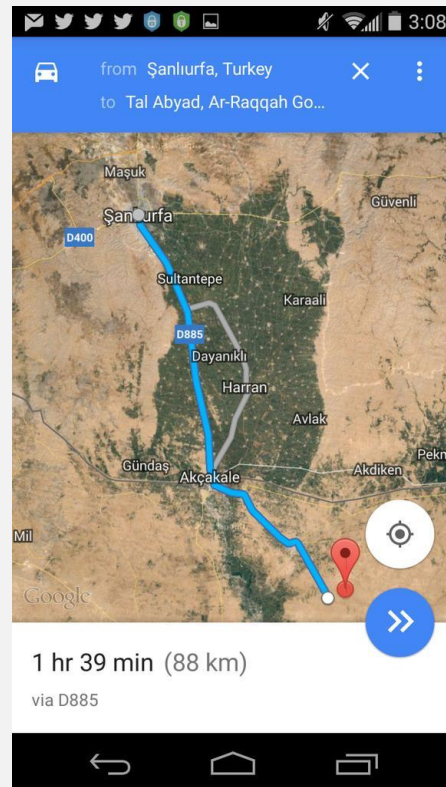

46

5/26/15 15:08 EST

Colonel Shaami

@kolonelsham

Do you a motorcycle or a car can you walk???

5/26/15 15:09 EST

sanliurfa is far a bet from tal abyd

47

5/26/15 15:10 EST

Colonel Shaami

@kolonelsham

must use car

5/26/15 15:10 EST

Can you take a bus akhi???

5/26/15 15:11 EST

Then get off and walk maybe try to sneak through the border???

5/26/15 15:11 EST

yes !! from where to where ? today or tomorrow

5/26/15 15:11 EST

no !! it's very dangerous , there are to much army

5/26/15 15:12 EST

iam in hotel in sanliurfa !! it's called Cumhuriyet oteli

5/26/15 15:13 EST

Koprubasi caddesi no.3 merkez / Urfa

5/26/15 15:01 EST

Colonel Shaami

@kolonelsham

Tomorrow night maybe make Dua to Allah that he screen you from the eyes of the Turkish soldiers ,make dua that you pass over safety akhi

5/26/15 15:14 EST

iam making Dua all the time

5/26/15 15:11 EST

Your off the highway which is good your not wearing any Muslims clothes correct??

5/26/15 15:16 EST

Colonel Shaami

@kolonelsham

but i don't know !!! to walk just like that is not easy , i wanted to make it but then i felt not good, iam not wearing any muslm clothes

5/26/15 15:17 EST

Everything pro IS is wiped from your computer yes???",

5/26/15 15:18 EST

there is nothing pro IS on computer

5/26/15 15:18 EST

it's not possible to send someone , may Allah send me to jahanam if i mean something wronge , room 114

5/26/15 15:20 EST

Just your twitter correct?? ,also you know any cabdriver willing to take you to the border

5/26/15 15:21 EST

Calm down akhi inshallah allah will make a way for you Patience

5/26/15 15:21 EST

my twitter is on my name Rami Hujeirat, the person can come as taxi driver

AMEER FAREED AZIZ (hereafter referred to as AZIZ), also known as "Stephen Fareed Boastwain"; Date of Birth July 22, 1969; Social Security Number [REDACTED], home address 1733 Fulton Street, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania (PA) 17102, was interviewed at his place of employment AMAZON, located at 2 Ames Drive, Carlisle, PA 17015, specifically the corporate conference room, by Special Agent (SA) KEVIN W. KIPP and Task Force Officer (TFO) HUGH EARHART, of the Philadelphia Office/Harrisburg Resident Agency of the FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION (FBI). After being advised of the identity of the interviewing agents, AZIZ provided the following information:

AZIZ thought JALIL has been on Twitter for approximately one year. AZIZ knew his son, identified as JALIL AMEER AZIZ (hereafter referred to as JALIL), was active on Twitter. JALIL would constantly use his cellular telephone to get online to use Twitter, watch YouTube videos or read the news. JALIL used the family desk top on a limited basis. They have a laptop but it is not working properly. AZIZ would ask or want to see what JALIL was doing on the phone. When asked by AZIZ to see what JALIL was doing (on the phone), JALIL would always show AZIZ. One time, JALIL locked his phone and AZIZ told JALIL to keep the phone unlocked so AZIZ could access the phone to see what JALIL was doing. AZIZ took the phone from JALIL several times based on what JALIL was doing on his phone.

AZIZ would talk with JALIL about the consequences of being online and posting on Twitter. About eight months ago, JALIL was watching Jihadi videos on YouTube. AZIZ was concerned about what JAIL was doing on the phone and AZIZ talked with JALIL to explain the right path of Islam versus what was being spread over the internet. Both of JALIL's parents told him, "stay off the tweet" and for JALIL to instead do his homework, help with house chores, and clean out the cat litter box. AZIZ stated, "I can't watch him 24/7". AZIZ told JALIL what he was doing on Twitter and online, "has consequences" and "stuff come back on you". AZIZ would always tell JALIL that he (JALIL) did not know who he was communicating with on Twitter.

At one time, AZIZ knew JALIL was tweeting with someone overseas, but AZIZ did not know the identity of the person. JALIL told AZIZ that he was helping someone get somewhere and do something. AZIZ thought it was to help someone to travel to the border of Turkey or Syria. In this instance, AZIZ specifically told JALIL to stop tweeting and AZIZ again reiterated it was wrong to be on Twitter. AZIZ did not remember the time frame when this happened.

AZIZ remembered he told JALIL three times to cancel his Twitter account because what JALIL was posting on Twitter was alarming to AZIZ. AZIZ knew that some of JALIL's Twitter accounts were suspended by Twitter. AZIZ did not know how many Twitter accounts were suspended or ended. AZIZ told JALIL what he was doing online would cause the FBI to come knocking at their door.

AZIZ stated JALIL never wanted to travel overseas. AZIZ would talk with JALIL about why going overseas was wrong. AZIZ knew that JALIL would not be able to travel overseas because he did not have money or a passport.

AZIZ stated there are no weapons at his house or in his vehicle. AZIZ purchased magazines and ammunition for a AR-15 rifle that he wanted to buy when the family first moved to Harrisburg. AZIZ purchased the magazines and ammunition from CHEAPER THAN DIRT. AZIZ did not purchase a rifle because he did not have the money and also because he did not want a rifle in his house. AZIZ's wife has a son from a previous marriage who sometimes visits their house and AZIZ stated the son was not stable. As such, AZIZ did not want a weapon in the house. The last time AZIZ saw the magazines and ammunition in the house was approximately 2 months ago. AZIZ put the magazines and ammunition in separate bags and placed both bags on a shelf in the garage.

JALIL has two backpacks which are beige and camouflaged or green in color. AZIZ bought the green colored backpack from AMAZON before AZIZ started working for AMAZON eight months ago. JALIL wanted a pocket knife, but did not get one. JALIL keeps the packs in his room. AZIZ would know what was in JALIL's room because it was so small but at the same time JALIL kept the room messy.

JALIL does not have money to purchase anything. AZIZ and his wife both have separate debit cards which his wife monitors closely. AZIZ's wife would know if a purchase was made from their accounts. AZIZ was certain JALIL did not purchase or has a weapon.

At the conclusion of the interview, AZIZ followed SA KIPP and TFO EARHART back to his residence. Upon arriving at the residence, AZIZ backed his vehicle into the garage of the residence. Once exiting the vehicle, SA KIPP explained and presented AZIZ with a FD-26 Form, entitled "DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE/FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION "CONSENT TO SEARCH" for his 2004

SANANEISHA SAMEERA AZIZ (SAMEERA), date of birth (DOB) November 11, 1955, social security account number [REDACTED], was interviewed at her residence, 1733 Fulton Street, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. After being advised of the identities of the interviewing Agents and the nature of the interview, SAMEERA provided the following information:

SAMEERA was born in the State of New York and married YUSSUF AZIZ in 1979. While married to YUSSUF, SAMEERA and YUSSUF moved to Texas and then back to New York.

The marriage to YUSSUF didn't work out and SAMEERA married STEPHEN BOATSWAIN aka AMEER AZIZ in 1992. While married to AMEER, SAMEERA and AMEER resided in Alexandria, Virginia, Forestville, Maryland, Newark, New Jersey, Montgomery Village, Maryland, and ultimately ended up in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania in December of 2013.

The AZIZ family relocated to Harrisburg, Pennsylvania due to SAMEERA accepting a position as the Principle at the AL HUDA SCHOOL located in Camp Hill, Pennsylvania. SAMEERA held the position for six months before being terminated. SAMEERA is currently unemployed and AMEER works at the Amazon warehouse located in Carlisle, Pennsylvania. SAMEERA and AMEER have a son, JALIL IBN AMEER AZIZ and all three currently reside at 1733 Fulton Street, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

No members of the AZIZ family have ever traveled overseas, but they all aspire to go to Hajj in Saudi Arabia one day. SAMEERA stated it was their obligation as Muslims to go on Hajj, but they do not have the money to do so at this time. SAMEERA tried to obtain employment in Qatar and Dubai but had no success. SAMEERA had never heard JALIL talk about wanting to travel overseas.

Approximately 1970, SAMEERA'S mother converted to Islam and SAMEERA converted shortly thereafter. AMEER converted to ISLAM in 1992 after AMEER and SAMEERA were married. JALIL was raised Muslim.

JALIL was born in Silver Spring, Maryland and was home schooled by SAMEERA. SAMEERA had a Masters Degree in education. JALIL received a high school diploma from Keystone. SAMEERA described Keystone as an online school. JALIL never attended college or took college level courses online. JALIL is currently unemployed, but aspires to be a chef. JALIL did attempt to obtain a job at McDonalds, for which SAMEERA filled out the application and took the personality test for JALIL, but JALIL did not get the job.

As stated above, SAMEERA, AMEER, and JALIL are the only residents of 1733 Fulton Street, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. The residence had wireless internet provided by Comcast. SAMEERA did not know if the wireless internet was secure or password protected. There are two computers in the home, both located in SAMEERA and AMEER'S bedroom. There was one laptop and one desktop computer. SAMEERA, AMEER, and JALIL all use these two computers. JALIL also had a smartphone which JALIL uses to access the internet.

Other than a Twitter account for her business, EXQUISITELY CRAFTED 4U, SAMEERA does not have any social media accounts or use and type of messaging applications. SAMEERA could not remember the vanity name or the @ handle for her business account. SAMEERA stated AMEER doesn't have any social media accounts.

In the beginning of the interview, SAMEERA stated she had never seen JALIL on any type of online social media account or online chatroom. When JALIL was on one of the two computers in SAMEERA'S bedroom, he was studying the Qur'an. SAMEERA further stated JALIL didn't and wasn't suppose to have any social media accounts such as Facebook or Twitter.

Later in the interview, SAMEERA stated she knew JALIL used Twitter. SAMEERA did not know any Twitter account names JALIL may have used. SAMEERA did see JALIL open a new Instagram account under the name "Toxic". JALIL told SAMEERA he opened the account in an attempt to obtain a free gaming system.

When SAMEERA found out JALIL had a Twitter account, JALIL told SAMEERA he was an Islamic Analyst and used the account for Islamic studies. SAMEERA told JALIL to shut down the account and JALIL stated he did, showing SAMEERA a closed account. At first, SAMEERA stated she did not know what JALIL was doing with his Twitter account, but later in the interview, SAMEERA stated she told JALIL what he was doing was bad and to stay away from ISIS.

SAMEERA stated JALIL rarely leaves the home, but when he does, it is to accompany AMEER to the masjid or to the store. JALIL never goes out on his own and does not have any friends. SAMEERA has never seen or heard JALIL talking to friends on the phone or using any type of online messaging application to chat with friends. SAMEERA does not let JALIL have any friends because she does not want his mind "poisoned" by outside influences. As an example, JALIL wanted to join some people in a paintball game but SAMEERA refused to let him go because she felt it would look bad for a Muslim to be playing paintball.

SAMEERA stated the only true English version Qur'an is the Noble Qur'an. SAMEERA stated JALIL basically sleeps or plays video games all day. There is no television in the home.

SAMEERA believed ISIS was a "bad" group. While discussing Hijra, SAMEERA stated she would like to reside in a Muslim country without political strife, but it is not an obligation. SAMEERA stated what ISIS was doing was crazy. SAMEERA had never heard JALIL talking about ISIS or wanting to join ISIS.

SAMEERA stated JALIL had a backpack that was for "prepping". SAMEERA knew JALIL had purchased magazines for an assault type rifle, but seemed shocked the magazines had bullets in them. SAMEERA stated the backpack should also contain a knife, a head cover, and other miscellaneous items. JALIL purchased the magazines from a company named CHEAPER THAN DIRT.

JALIL told SAMEERA they should buy a gun for home protection, but SAMEERA refused. While JALIL does receive some money from his sister and grandmother, and could potentially buy a gun without SAMEERA'S consent, SAMEERA stated she is home all day and would know if JALIL bought a gun. SAMEERA does not like guns and did not allow JALIL to go to a gun range when JALIL asked. When JALIL couldn't buy a gun, JALIL asked if he could at least buy the magazines, which SAMEERA allowed.

Despite self admitting she does not know the full extent of JALIL'S activities, SAMEERA stated she does not believe JALIL is a threat to anyone and JALIL wouldn't have gotten into any type of trouble if it wasn't for his cell phone. SAMEERA claimed JALIL has never shown an affinity for violence and is well liked by the members of the masjid.

After the conclusion of the interview, the interviewing agents were with SAMEERA when AMEER arrived at the residence. AMEER stated to SAMEERA they told him this activity was going to get him in trouble to which SAMEERA agreed.

Ali AMIN, was interviewed at Federal Correctional Institution (FCI) [REDACTED] by Task Force Officer (TFO) Jeffrey Gruppo and Special Agent (SA) Kevin Kipp. Also present was SA's David Martinez and Jane Courtney, and TFO Todd Bratz. After being advised of the identity of the interviewing Agents and the nature of the interview, AMIN provided the following information:

AMIN recalled the Twitter persona Colonel Shaami. AMIN initially thought it was a "spin-off" persona of a British individual known as "Azi Shami." AMIN realized the persona Colonel Shammi actually belonged to Jalil Aziz after he (AMIN) watched a CNN news article following Aziz's arrest. AMIN described the "Colonel Shaami" accounts as being aggressive in their posting of ISIL related material. AMIN stated that he never actually spoke to the user of Colonel Shaami through Twitter direct messages or through any other communications platforms.

AMIN was often had individuals try to contact him on Twitter, but he did not usually reply to them. AMIN opined that when someone would contact another person on Twitter for assistance to travel to Syria, it was because they trusted that account, based on what they were posting. AMIN stated that everything you needed to know to travel to Syria could be found online.

[REDACTED]

AMIN was asked to explain the Islamic madkhali movement. AMIN explained this was an Islamic movement that was in favor of the Saudi government. Madkhali's are never supporters of ISIL.
